

KNAPP

Died in Electric Chair at Columbus

ONLY ONE SHOCK NEEDED TO DO THE WORK

Doomed Man Confessed to One More Crime.

KNAPP'S CAREER OF CRIME

His Last Hours Were Spent With a Mirister and In Playing An Ac- cordion.

Columbus, Aug. 19.—After spending the evening in communion with his spiritual adviser, Rev. D. A. Clark, and in playing the accordion, Alfred Knapp, the wife murderer, self-confessed, was electrocuted shortly after midnight this morning. Only one shock was required. He was placed in the chair at 12:03 and six minutes later was pronounced dead. When the Warden asked him if he had anything to say Knapp replied: "Nothing."

Before he went to the death chair, Knapp confessed his guilt of a crime hitherto not charged against him. He told Captain Sims of the night watch at the annex, that he desired to clear another man's name of a crime of which he had been wrongfully accused. The man is Joe Roth of Hamilton. Sometime ago Roth was arrested, tried and acquitted of the charge of assaulting two little girls at Hamilton. The children were Halie and Sallie Motzer. Knapp told Captain Sims that he had committed the crime, and that he wanted Roth's name completely cleared of the affair. He made no other confession. Knapp's remains will be buried in Mt. Calvary cemetery, this city.

Alfred A. Knapp was electrocuted for the murder of his third wife, Hannah Goddard Knapp, on December 21, 1902, the woman was last seen alive at her home in Hamilton, Ohio. Later it developed that Knapp had strangled her on the night of December 22, placed her body in a box, carted it to the Miami river and threw it in. The next day after Mrs. Knapp disappeared Knapp spent several days in Cincinnati, visiting his sister, Mrs. Ed King, and announced that he was looking for his wife, who had disappeared. He then returned to Hamilton, and later left for Indianapolis where on January 2, 1903, he met Anna May Gamble, and married her on the 4th of the following February. On February 22, 1903, at Hamilton, Ed King of Cincinnati, Knapp's brother-in-law began an investigation of the disappearance of Hannah Goddard Knapp. Suspicion was directed to Knapp, and on February 25 he was arrested in Indianapolis on the charge of murdering his wife. He was returned to Hamilton and made a full confession, saying that he had strangled his wife, while she was asleep, and then threw the body in the river. On the next day, in the Hamilton jail he made another confession, stating that he had murdered five women, including his second wife. The murders to which he confessed follow:

Emma Lippelman killed in a lumber yard at Cincinnati, June 27, 1894.
Mary Eckert, killed on Walnut street, Cincinnati, Aug. 1, 1894.
Jennie Conors Knapp his second wife, killed on Liberty street, Cincinnati, August 27, 1894.
Ida Gebhart a child, killed in Indianapolis in July, 1896.
Hannah Goddard Knapp, his third wife, killed at Hamilton, Ohio, December 22, 1902. All of these were strangled to death.
On March 2, 1903, the nude body of Hannah Goddard Knapp was found near New Albany, Ind., below the Ohio river falls. Knapp's trial followed, and although vigorous effort

FOREST FIRES ARE RAGING IN VICINITY OF VANCOUVER SHIPS AT SEA SEEM IN A FOG

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 19.—Reports from Vancouver, this state, are to the effect that forest fires continue the destruction of property in that section. United States soldiers have been ordered from Vancouver barracks to the scene and are aiding lumbermen and farmers in their efforts to subdue the flames. At Fourth Plane a saw mill and nearly a dozen houses have been destroyed. The value of the timber burned amounts to many thousands of dollars. The fires are beyond human control and only a heavy rain can stop them. Smoke is so thick that ships at sea are obliged to use every precaution as in heavy fogs.

Of Thomas Watson, of Georgia, of His Notification For the Presidency.

New York, Aug. 19.—The Populist party also has had its inning, the notification ceremonies at Cooper union drawing out a large crowd. Thomas Watson of Georgia, candidate for president, and Thomas E. Tibbles of Nebraska, candidate for vice president, both were present and made addresses. There was much cheering when Alfred G. Boulton of Brooklyn, took his seat as chairman of the meeting. He at once introduced Judge Samuel W. Williams of Indiana, who made the speech officially notifying the candidates of their selection. When Mr. Watson arose to speak the cheering continued nearly four minutes. Chairman Boulton introduced him in half a dozen words, simply referring to him as the candidate of the People's party.

Body Found in the Creek.
Indianapolis, Aug. 19.—The body of Miss Julia Allenberg, 27, who had been missing since Tuesday, was found in Fall creek. Her hat, shoes and pocketbook, together with two notes saying that she had committed suicide because she was losing her mind, were found on the bank. STRAY STEERS

Pounced Upon By Dwellers in the Stockyards District—Police Interfered.

Chicago, Aug. 19.—Hungry dwellers of the packing house district sought to capture and kill eight steers which had escaped from the yards. The mob numbered 4,000 persons, and the streets were cleared only after 120 policemen, in five squads, had charged the rioters on four sides. Shots were fired and scores of rioters were clubbed. A bullet grazed the cheek of Police Lieutenant George Prim, and a police sergeant was stripped of his star and club by a woman rioter. One man was so severely battered that he was sent to the Englewood Union hospital. Four arrests were made, as the police contented themselves with dispersing the mob.

International Socialists.
Amsterdam, Aug. 19.—The International Socialist and Trades Union congress adopted a resolution declaring in effect that the proletariat was not yet sufficiently organized to make practicable a general strike involving the complete cessation of work, because such a strike would render the existence of the proletariat itself impossible. The congress, therefore, submits that although a strike affecting a large number of trades might be used as a last means of effecting changes or protecting workmen against reactionary attacks, workmen should be warned not to allow themselves to be influenced by the propaganda advocating a general strike.

LAD

Kidnapped in New York Returns Home

CHILD TAKEN TO THE POLICE STATION TO TELL STORY

Identified Prisoner as Man Who Kidnapped Him.

DETECTIVES WORKING TODAY

On the Clues That Were Furnished By the Nine-Year-Old Son of a Brooklyn Man.

New York, Aug. 19.—Antonio Mannino, the 9-year-old boy who was kidnapped ten days ago from his home in Brooklyn, and held in $50,000 ransom by an Italian band thought to be the "Black Hand" society, was returned to his home early this morning. Young Mannino was making his way alone through Brooklyn on his way home, when he was found by his uncle. The boy was taken home and then to the police station, where he identified Angelo Cucozza as his kidnaper. Salvatore Mannino told the story of the finding of the boy and Captain Rooney ordered him placed under arrest. Captain Rooney refused to give any explanation for the arrest of Salvatore, except to say that the whole mystery would soon be cleared up. The mother and father of the boy, when he was returned to them first heartily embraced the lad and then fell to their knees and thanked God. Young Mannino was found crying in the streets within five blocks of his home. To the police he told the story of the kidnapping. He said that Angelo Cucozza came to him and asked him to go with him to New York, that he could buy him ice cream and other good things. Mannino said he would go and the pair started for the ferry, but on the way the grandmother of Mannino met them and sent the boy back home. The next day Cucozza and Mannino started again and when they reached Manhattan they took a long walk and at night reached a large tenement house which they entered. Mannino says he was taken to a room where they were greeted by a woman. Mannino says he was kept there two days when two men came and took him to a house in the country and kept him there. A woman looked after him, he said, and he was well taken care of. He said he asked to be taken home, but they would not let him out. Last night one of the men brought him to the house in the country and told him that he was to be taken home. Mannino said after a long ride they came to a ferry and the man put him on board and left him. While walking home he said, his uncle Salvatore, picked him up and carried him home.

The police went to Angelo Cucozza's cell and brought him into the room, where Mannino was telling his story. Mannino identified Cucozza as the man who had kidnapped him and Cucozza in a rage turned and attempted to hurt the boy, but was prevented. Detectives have been sent out to follow up the clues given by young Mannino.

CUT RATES

Cunard Line Officials Decline to Furnish Any Information on Eastbound Rates.

London, Aug. 19.—Cunard line officials persistently decline to furnish any information regarding their latest cut in eastbound rates. The White Star line intends to be content at present with meeting the attack by a corresponding cut in second cabin rates. It is anticipated that other lines in the American service will meet the cut in eastward passages. The Canadian lines, it is asserted, propose to maintain the existing rates.

TURKEY HAS FOOLED AMERICA ACCORDING TO HER OLD CUSTOM DECLARES BERLIN PAPER TODAY

Berlin, Aug. 19. — (Bulletin)—The Frankfurter Zeitung today asserts that the Porte indulged in sharp practices in its dealings with the United States in the matter of the latter's demands for proper treatment of American schools in Turkey, etc. American Minister Leishmann, the paper says, thanked the Porte for the satisfactory settlement of the differences. He received a reply that he had misunderstood the Turkish note which did not concede America's demands.

The paper adds: "The withdrawal of American warships was thus premature, Turkey fooling America according to traditional methods."

BOMBARDED

By Insurgent Vessels Was the Capital of Paraguay—Damage Is Unknown.

Buenos Aires, Aug. 19.—Three insurgent vessels bombarded Asuncion, the capital of Paraguay, 40 minutes. The extent of the damage is unknown. The government artillery replied to the insurgents and one gun burst, wounding several government soldiers. The ministers of Argentina, Brazil, Italy and France boarded one of the insurgent vessels and held a long and secret conference, at the end of which a truce of 24 hours was declared in order to give the women and children an opportunity to leave the capital before further bombardment.

As Viewed by Germany.
Berlin, Aug. 19.—The foreign office taking note of the possible rupture between China and Japan in connection with the repairs to Russian war vessels at Shanghai, expresses the view that Japan may send a small warship into the harbor to ascertain whether the disarmament of the Russian ships has occurred. But the officials here do not believe the matter has reached a critical stage, or that a serious situation will result. The German view naturally is that China should take the same course toward the Russian vessels at Shanghai as Germany did towards those which sought refuge at Tsingtau.

Ambassador to Germany Calls Upon the President—Other Callers of the Day.

Washington, Aug. 19.—Charles Magnan Tower, ambassador of the United States to Germany, paid his respects to the president. He will remain in this country on leave for several weeks, possibly until after the November elections. Charles Emory Smith, editor of the Philadelphia Press and formerly postmaster general, talked with the president regarding political conditions. Francis B. Thurber of New York, organizer of business men's Republican clubs, told the president what his organization was doing and the methods it employed.

To Prevent Russians' Escape.
Tokio, Aug. 19.—It is not probable that Japanese vessels will enter Shanghai to seize the Russian warships there. Japan always has an international port and during her war with China she refrained from attacking. Japan relies upon the Chinese government to disarm the cruiser Askold and the destroyer Crozovoi, but there is no doubt that she will blockade the mouth of the Yang Tse to prevent the escape of the Russian vessels.

SO AS TO STOP THE DRAIN ON HER RESOURCES

Japs Lose Thousands in the Three Day Battle.

STONG POSITIONS ARE CARRIED

Russian Version of the Dash From Port Arthur—Live War News of the Day.

Washington, Aug. 19.—(Bulletin)—An impression is obtained in official and diplomatic circles today that Russia is seriously contemplating the addition of China to the war zone, in the hope that interference of other European governments will stop the conflict that is draining her resources and threatening her with humiliating defeat.

Washington, Aug. 19.—Consul General Fowler at Chefoo cabled the state department this morning that two Japanese torpedo boat destroyers entered the harbor there yesterday, while several Japanese cruisers remain outside. On the return they ran across a steamer, nationality unknown, to Fowler, and seized her.

Battle Near Liao Yang.
Mukden, Aug. 19.—A battle in the neighborhood of Liao Yang is imminent. Japanese forces have advanced to within 20 miles of Liao Yang and skirmishes between their outposts and those of the Russian army are constant.

Fighting Renewed.
Chefoo, Aug. 19.—According to information received here today the Japanese at Port Arthur have renewed the fighting and have penetrated the abandoned Chinese arsenal a mile and a quarter east of town. The stockyards and buildings surrounding them are said to have been severely damaged by Japanese shells. Explosions are frequently heard in the town. The Japanese are reported to have captured inner forts number three and four.

Final Assault Is On.
London, Aug. 19.—It is believed in official quarters that the final assault by the Japanese on the Russian stronghold of Port Arthur is on. As soon as word was received from General Stoessel that he could not accede to the Japanese demands for surrender of the Port, and final bombardment began and has been proceeding ever since. In the two days' fight the Japs have lost over 10,000 men.

Russian Baltic Fleet.
London, Aug. 19.—The Reuter Telegram company today received a report that eleven ships of the Russian Baltic sea fleet left Libau for the far East on Monday.

Chefoo, Aug. 19.—Desperate assaults on the part of the Japanese and equally desperate resistance by the Russians have been the features of the fighting around Port Arthur on Aug. 14 and 15. The Japanese sacrificed 20,000 more men, but gained important advantages in the matter of position. The above news was brought here on junks, one of which having on board three Russians concealed in the baggage of Chinese to escape from the Japanese. Left Port Arthur Wednesday night and was blown rapidly to Chefoo by a gale. The main force of the attack was directed against the left wing and resulted in the capture of Pigeon Bay positions and some of the forts at Liao Tieshan. At Palun Chang the Japanese hastily mounted guns which did excellent service in aiding the storming of the right wing, where the Japanese are said to have captured two forts of minor value, mounting eight four inch guns, two siege guns and six quick firing guns. The position that the Japanese occupy on Liao Tishang peninsula is not clear, but numerous Chinese sources aver that the Japanese have been seen in force in that section. Apparently a cruising attack originating in Louisa bay swept through the Pigeon bay positions into the peninsula, in the day.

Gen. E. A. McAlpin of New York, will not support the candidacy of President Roosevelt. He has been a lifelong Republican and one of the largest contributors to Republican campaign funds in the State.

Theodore Cox, President of the New York State League of Republican Clubs in 1900 and 1902, the Republican candidate for Congress in the Ninth District in 1900, a delegate to the Republican State Conventions in 1893 and 1900 and President of the Republican College League in 1904-5, has come out in an open letter in support of Judge Parker for the Presidency.

Referring to Judge Parker's resignation of the office of Chief Judge of the New York Court of Appeals, the Chicago News says:

His action in this matter is a gratifying evidence of his loyalty to high ideals and high standards of honor and integrity in the conduct of the judiciary. He has strengthened the unwritten law which decrees that no man occupying a judicial position has a right to cast suspicion on the judiciary by exposing it to political influences or permitting it to serve private ambitions.

The Chicago News is not a party paper, though it has Republican leanings. In this instance it gives expression to the general sentiment of the country.

After a determined contest Senator Dubois and his friends were able to secure the passage of a resolution by the Democratic State convention of Idaho calling for the complete suppression of polygamy. The action will doubtless preclude all hope of support from the Mormon voters of the State for the Democratic ticket, but these had previously been alienated by the plank in the Democratic National platform on the same subject. The stand taken by the Idaho Democrats therefore ought to help them by attracting to their support the men of other parties who do not believe in polygamy, and who are disgusted by the attitude favoring the evil adopted by the Republican party and its leaders. Idaho under the circumstances therefore still remains a debatable State, and there is good hope that it may give its electoral votes to Parker and Davis.

Our Candidate for Congress is Solid in Old Licking.

The Wayne County Democrat has the following to say in regard to our popular candidate for congress, Hon. J. E. Hurst:
"Hon. W. Stilwell, of Millersburg, was in Wooster on Friday. Judge Stilwell was both temporary and permanent chairman of the late Democratic Congressional convention held at Coshocton, by which ex-Senator J. E. Hurst was nominated for congress. Judge Stilwell was also a delegate to the Democratic National convention held at St. Louis, beginning on the 6th of July. He is fully acquainted with the present political situation in Licking county and in the lower counties of the 17th district. In a conversation with E. B. Eshleman, the judge said that from a Democratic point of view, the situation is perfectly right. In answer to the question: 'Is there any break in the lower counties of the district on Hon. J. E. Hurst for congress?' he answered unqualifiedly, 'no, none whatever.'"

So far as Licking county is concerned no more popular candidate for congress has been nominated in the 17th district since the district was formed. He will poll the solid Democratic vote here and when the ballots are counted in November it will be found that he has polled more than his party's strength. We know whereof we speak when we make this statement.

Mr. Hurst was not Licking county's first choice at the Congressional convention, because the county had a candidate of its own in the person of E. M. P. Brister. But the fairness of Mr. Hurst's methods as a candidate at the convention was such as to meet the absolute approval and commendation of Judge Brister and his friends. And today there is no stronger supporter of J. E. Hurst in the entire district than E. M. P. Brister. Judge Brister's friends, too, without exception all over Licking county, are giving their united, earnest support to Mr. Hurst, as all other Democrats in the county are doing.

Mr. Hurst will not only carry Licking county by a good majority, but he will run ahead of his ticket here.

Gold continues to go out of the country. When the Democrats were in power the Republican organs shrieked themselves hoarse over such a terrible calamity. They couldn't think of anything else. They writhed and frothed and grew hysterical and had all sorts of nightmares and fits. Now, the fact is that Republican management—bad management—has caused this outflow. The gold will come back, but not under present conditions.

Unfortunately the largest diamond in the world is not of the crystalline sort used as a gem. If it were its value would be fabulous, for it is 17 times larger than the famous Victoria diamond, the largest of modern fuds, which was sold for $1,000,000. Its value depends upon the use to which it can be put when broken up, for it is of the amorphous kind, known technically as carbon.

DR. LARIMORE IS DEAD

One of the Best Known Physician of Newark Passed Away at His Home in West Main Street Thursday Evening--The Funeral Saturday.

Dr. James Larimore, one of Newark's most prominent and most esteemed citizens, died at his home on West Main street, on Thursday evening at 8:15 o'clock, after an illness of some time with a complication of diseases. He had been in failing health for the past two or three years, and several months ago was taken seriously ill but rallied and it was thought that he was on the road to recovery. He however grew worse again and on Friday, August 12, was compelled to take to his bed. From that time he rapidly grew worse.

On Thursday evening about 7:40 o'clock, he was sitting on a sofa with his son James, and was engaged in quoting scripture and singing hymns. About 8 o'clock his son assisted him to his bed, when he immediately dropped off to sleep, and died in fifteen minutes.

Dr. Larimore was born on March 5, 1840, on the old Larimore farm, two miles west of Licking church, in Union township Licking county, and was married on November 16, 1865, to Miss Arabella W. Brady daughter of the late Gilbert Brady, one of the pioneer settlers of Licking county. From this union two children were born, J. A. Larimore, of the Postal Telegraph company, Pittsburg, and Corrinth H. Larimore, who died April 7, 1893.

When quite young the deceased educated himself for the practice of medicine, and had been engaged in the practice of his profession in Newark for over forty years. For the past 25 years he had been surgeon for the Pennsylvania railroad company at his point and a portion of that time was surgeon for the Baltimore and Ohio railroad company.

The deceased was held in the highest esteem and respect by all who knew him. He was a high-minded, scholarly gentleman, a loving husband and father, and a good citizen. For many years he had been a faithful and consistent member of the Second Presbyterian church, and was also a prominent Mason and Knight Templar.

He is survived by his widow and one son, James. One brother and two sisters also survive him, being John Larimore of Union Station, and Mrs. Caroline Kirkendall of Columbus and Mrs. Sarah Howland, widow of A. T. Howland of this city.

The funeral will take place from the house on Saturday at 2:30 p. m., under the auspices of Newark Lodge, No. 97, F. & A. M. St. Luke's Commandery No. 34, K. T., will attend as an escort. The services will be conducted by Rev. L. S. Boyce, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, and interment will be made in Cedar Hill cemetery.

Mrs. Larimore's Condition.
In comparison with a few days ago the condition of Mrs. Larimore, widow of Dr. J. Larimore, is considerably improved, as she was able to sit up on Thursday. It is hoped the improvement will continue.

IS M'NULTY INSANE?

Murderous Assault Committed on Joe McManus at County Jail, McManus Being Rendered Unconscious--McNulty Raves in His Cell.

Joe McNulty, one of the most desperate criminals ever confined in the county jail, made a murderous assault on a fellow prisoner, Joe McManus about 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon. With the other prisoners these two were in the corridor back of the tier of cells, when without a word McNulty attacked McManus with a broom, the handle of which he used with such telling effect that McManus was rendered unconscious.

Dr. J. W. Hornby attended him and his injuries are not considered serious. With the aid of the other prisoners McNulty was pushed into his cell and locked up, where he will be kept. He is either insane or is feigning this condition in the opinion of Sheriff Anderson. On Friday he insisted that the sheriff should bring Governor Herrick to the jail as he wished to talk with him. He raves and storms and everything loose in the cell he has broken up.

McNulty has served three terms in the penitentiary, and is now awaiting the action of the grand jury. With Max McCann he was bound over in the sum of $1,000 each for burglarizing Flory and Miller's law office. McManus was bound over for holding a man up on a B. & O. freight train near Black Hand.

PRECEDENT

Of Taylor Incident To Be Plead on Behalf of a Negro to Prevent Extradition.

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 19.—Will Governor Mickey of Nebraska, follow the precedent established by Governor Durbin of Indiana, when he refused to honor requisition papers for Governor Taylor of Kentucky, on the grounds that he could not get a fair trial, and prevent the return to Mississippi of Walter Williams, a negro strike breaker, arrested at the Cudaby plant on a warrant charging him with criminal assault on a girl in Lafayette county, that state?

Williams does not deny that he is the man wanted, but denies that he committed the offense, and will today appeal to the Governor to prevent him from being taken back South, where he says he will surely be lynched without a trial. Williams' attorneys will cite the action and decisions of Governor Durbin in making the appeal to the Nebraska Governor.

Williams gives a graphic account of being chased by bloodhounds and officers through swamps of Mississippi and of being wounded by a bullet fired by Sheriff Price of Yahosha county Miss during the flight.

Price reached Omaha yesterday, and corroborated the story of the negro in this respect, and says he is sure of his man. During the assault the victim bit through the finger of one of her assailants, and Williams bears the marks on his right hand. After his escape from the posse and after a three days' hunt in the swamps, Williams made his way to Memphis and Sees Victory Ahead For the Democrats This Fall--He is in Touch With Events.

Mt. Clemens, Mich., Aug. 19.—Wm. R. Hearst, who is here with his wife for a short rest, said last night: "Republicans are making much talk of the so-called trust support of Democracy. It exists in Republican newspapers only. Because a few men who are identified with corporations are supporting the ticket they raise a great cry, but where there is one Belmont in the Democratic party there are a hundred in the Republican. Democracy's plank is plain on the trust question, and if we win we will keep our promises."

Mr. Hearst says the Democrats have a splendid chance to win. He is keeping in close touch with the campaign. He receives lengthy reports of the situation daily from all over the country. His buttan keeps two offices here busy.

Old Hickory of Two Kinds—Three of the Greatest Things in the World. Fifteen Million Acres of Forests. 'Seng Hunters of the Tennessee Mountains—Reminders of Daniel Boone—Cobras of Ceylon—Strange Water Craft—Several Kinds of Flour. Ingenious Case of Wooden Books.

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE BY MARK BENNETT.)

The sinewy title of "Old Hickory," inseparable from the name of Andrew Jackson, is strictly Tennesseean. That's why it stuck to the old general. I found it out by sitting reflectively in the Tennessee exhibit of woods. My eyes went trotting through the display and fell upon a snub-nosed hickory handle. Mr. A. P. Foster of Tennessee caught my eye and said, "Yes, those are old hickory, every one a perfect specimen."

"Jacksonian," said I. "And that suggests," said Mr. Foster, "the story of how President Jackson got the title. In 1812 he organized by government authority a military expedition at Natchez. Waiting under orders for many weeks, he and his men became restless and did not hesitate to show that they wanted to do something. Finally came the order to disband, which Jackson flatly refused to do, for it meant the abandonment of his army in a wilderness without means of support. 'I'll march them into the heart of Tennessee to disband,' he said, and away they went, the general marching with his men. As they tramped on the way one of his soldiers exclaimed, 'See General Jackson there, tough as old hickory.'"

The old hickory of Tennessee, as well as its once living, sentient embodiment, has wide fame.

"One of our turning works," said Mr. Foster, "sells its product in such distant markets as Rio de Janeiro, Hongkong, Calcutta, Cape Town, Sydney, Melbourne and Marseilles. Think of a Tennessee mountain village having such worldwide representation! Scarcely any of the product is sold in Lancaster."

Three of the greatest things in the world are right here before one's eyes, and you couldn't guess them in a week. One is the largest wooden bowl ever made, big enough for the three wise men of Gotham to cross the Atlantic in if the weather was calm and their deportment right steady. It is four feet across and two and a half feet deep. It used to belong to a Tennessee giant, for you may know they have giants in Tennessee—real live giants. This one must have been 200 feet high, with thousands of limbs and millions of leaves.

Another greatest thing on earth is the section of a black walnut log six feet nine and a half inches across. The third is a display of the only butchers' skewer factory in the United States. So when you draw a hesitating skewer from the juicy roast of beef at your next dinner think of Tennessee and her 35,000,000 acres of woods.

Tennessee has forests so old that the trees are dying of senility, and in these woods are people as curious as the naked pygmies on the hill yonder or the Patagonian giants in their decollete summer blankets. I would like to add the ginseng hunters of Tennessee to Dr. McGee's ethnological display. With a life so rude that the American Indian is a nabob, the 'seng hunters of the Tennessee uplands carry on a traffic that rolls up handsomely in money. In Nashville alone $50,000 worth of ginseng is sold annually, a product of the woods.

So while New York state is preserving her forests and getting anxious about her future timber supply Tennessee is inviting investors to come down and make money out of the lumber industry. Here, at the world's fair, Tennessee has 119 kinds of wood, all of it useful, all of it beautiful, for nature does her work most wonderfully in fitting together the millions of minute cells into what we call the grain of the wood. Mr. Foster will call your attention to panels of mahogany, and you will have to guess which is mahogany and which is stained greenore.

Reminders of the pictures and the days of Daniel Boone are the coonskin hunter's cap, the long rifle weighing sixteen pounds, the old powderhorn and leather sack and a dugout canoe.

I conclude that Ceylon is not looking for immigration, else she would not exhibit in a great show case in the Palace of Forestry, Fish and Game two hooded cobras with heads erect and coiled ready for the fatal spring—a fatal to any living thing whose flesh the poison penetrates. As well might Arkansas exhibit the poisonous water moccasin or Pennsylvania her rattlesnakes. What an emblem of irrevocable decree is the cobra! The cobra's bite knows no antidote. Who can say but that intimate association with the cobra since times prehistoric, since the period of primitive man, in the ancient east is responsible for the now inborn spirit of fatalism from which few orientals are exempt?

Ceylon repels with her cobras, but fascinates with the politeness and industry of her people. The cobras are but an incident. The beautiful leopard in the same case with the cobras are meant to illustrate the animal resources of Cingalese jungles. An island people from necessity follow the sea, so here we may look upon the water craft—a long step from the Herreshoffs or the Cramps, but interesting nevertheless and serving well the purposes of a people to whom time and effort seem to have less value than to the strenuous denizens of color and more rigorous climes. The catamaran with huge sail and other models with hark or rush awnings are rude but serviceable.

Ceylon exploits her commerce modestly. A little case contains samples of a variety of tanning barks, woods, and roots, sweet potato meal, plantain meal and casava meal and tobacco. Most striking is Ceylon's exhibit of woods. Few visitors overlook it. Out of a huge log a quarter section has been cut, and then from the interior enough has been taken to leave a roomy compartment which is closed with a glass door. In here a stately row of tomes with bright backs are labeled with the names of Ceylon woods. Each tome is a block of wood, no two alike.

The catfish of the west—the bull-head of New York's lottering streams—seems out of place in clear water, but he is here on view in this beautiful Palace of Fish and Forestry at the world's fair. You may see him in the massive tanks of clear water lighted from above line the walls. Along with him are many other fish, strange or familiar.

You and I knew the catfish best at springtime when the old inlet boiled over and raised Cain with everything that wasn't tied to a tree. Sometimes it took the tree. Then it was all off. We used to sit on the blunt end of an old scow, upholding a hickory fish-pole strong enough to land a cow—never less than two hooks, baited with night hawks, and when we brought up a double header there was a celebration all along the line, with here and there expressions of juvenile jealousy. Oh, those catfish do bring back such memories!

NEWPORT FADS.

Society Girls Give the Military Salute and Attend "Swim Dinners." Newport has a new belle this season. She is Miss Anita Sands, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Sands, the latter formerly Miss Lorillard of New York, and she has given the town a number of thrills, says the Philadelphia North American.

The girls cultivate a most informal manner at Newport. Indeed, among them to be on one's dignity is not to be in the fashion. Some call out, "Hello, there!" at even the laughtiest of matrons.

Led by Miss Sands, these girls have instituted a new fad in salutations. Instead of merely bowing to friends, they salute in military fashion, with decidedly fetching results. Another fad of the set in which Miss Sands shines is the swimming party. The fancy originated recently with Pembroke Jones and was eagerly taken up as something new and really worth the while. Mr. Jones sent out cards to a number of cottagers, asking them to meet at the yacht club one afternoon and bring their bathing suits. They had the jolliest kind of a time. Those who were unable to swim floated around with the aid of life preservers. After the swim the party boarded the yacht Narada for a trip up the bay, during which dinner was served. Miss Sands and her coterie thought the idea "just too jolly for anything." So the "dinner swim" or "swim dinner" is now thoroughly entrenched.

SALOON IN HIS CHURCH.

Minneapolis Minister Will Establish Tavern in Basement of Edifice.

There is one Minneapolis minister who approves of the Subway tavern in New York, made famous by the presence of Bishop Potter at the dedication ceremonies, says the New York Herald. He is the Rev. G. L. Morrill, pastor of the People's church of Minneapolis. Dr. Morrill stated the other day that he believed the opening of the saloon in question was a step in the right direction and that he will have a tavern in the basement of his new church, which is to be completed Oct. 1.

"Toozie" Rogers, owner of several saloons, is building the church for Dr. Morrill, who is pastor of the Actors' alliance in Minneapolis. There will be a theater in the building devoted to vaudeville.

"We will devote the profits to some worthy charity," said Dr. Morrill. "If the people must drink, let them drink righteously."

"Chief Dairymaid to the King." The official title of Miss Mary Childs, a pretty young woman who was recently installed in King Edward's home farm at Windsor. The position is by no means a sinecure, for the chief dairymaid must supervise the butter and cheese making industry under royal patronage. Her principal duty is to serve up for the royal table two pounds of butter every morning and supplies of cream cheese and thick cream as needed.

Prize Post Cards.

The Australian postmaster general recently invited competitive designs for pictorial post cards to be printed and issued by his department for use throughout the commonwealth. Premiums of $50, $25 and $15 respectively will be paid for three series of twelve designs each adjudged by the postmaster general to be first, second and third in order of merit in the case of each state. The designs will consist exclusively of Australian subjects.

THE LOWER ANIMALS.

They Are Keen of Perception, but Are Incapable of Thought.

Animals have been preceptual-keen in many respects than our own—but they form no conceptions, have no powers of comparing one thing with another. They live entirely in and through their senses. To all that inner world of reflection, imagination, comparison, reason, they are strangers. They never return upon themselves in thought. They have sense memory, sense intelligence, and they profit in many ways by experience, but they have not soul memory or rational intelligence. All the fundamental emotions and appetites men and the lower animals share in common, such as fear, anger, love, hunger, jealousy, cunning, pride, curiosity, play, but the world of thought and thought experience and the emotions that go with it belong to man alone.

It is as if the psychic world were divided into two planes, one above the other—the plane of sense and the plane of spirit. In the plane of sense live the lower animals, only now and then just breaking for a moment into the higher plane. In the world of sense man is immersed also; this is his start and foundation, but he rises into the plane of spirit, and here lives his proper life. He is emancipated from sense in a way that beasts are not.—John Burroughs in Harper's Magazine.

A PLAGUE RELIC.

The London Gazette Was One Result of the Great Epidemic.

A curious relic of the great plague survives still in the London Gazette. During the epidemic the autumn session of parliament was held at Oxford from Oct. 9 to 31, 1665, and Charles II. and his court went there to attend the session and to escape infection.

As it was essential that London should be kept informed of the proceedings, the king started an official journal, entitled the Oxford Gazette, the first number of which appeared on Wednesday, Nov. 15, 1665. It contained an account of what had been done in the way of appointments and gave some items of court news. About two months later the publication was transferred to the metropolis as the London Gazette.

The first Oxford issue does not appear to have reached London until Nov. 22, at least Pepsy records under that date, very characteristically: "This day the first of the Oxford Gazettes came out; very pretty, full of news, and no folly in it. Wrote by Williamson. It pleased me to have it demonstrated that a purser without professed cheating is a professional loser, twice as much as he gets."

The Thieving Blue Jay.

Greenleaf Davis, the hunter of Mount Katahdin, tells of a blue jay's nest that contained the shells of more than 250 eggs, which the jays had stolen from the nests of song birds and taken home for their young to feed on. Hidden in one side of the nest was a gold watch which a hunter from Worcester had lost the previous autumn and had accused his guide of stealing. The watch had been hung on the limb of a lean-to camp at night, and when the hunter woke in the morning the timepiece was missing.

Almost a Heroine.

A New Hampshire woman was almost a heroine the other day. She was in her pantry and noticed the tail of a mouse protruding from a cupboard. Quickly grabbing a pair of tongs she fastened them to the mouse's tail and yanked. The mouse came out all right, but the front end of it was half way down the throat of a three foot snake. The woman ran shrieking from the house in search of her husband and is still at a loss to know how the snake got into the house.

JAPANESE FINE SHOTS.

Russian Sergeant of Scouts Tells of the Enemy's Good Points. A Russian sergeant of scouts who was captured by the Japanese, but who escaped with eight comrades from the island of Shikoku, Japan, has arrived at Paris, says the New York Times. He communicates some curious impressions of the war.

The Japanese, he says, are excellent shots, and no Russian reconnoitering party could remain a quarter of an hour under their fire. To four or five of the enemy whom the Russians would manage to kill the Japanese would shoot a hundred Russians.

The sergeant says the Japanese cannon are immensely superior to the Russian, having a longer range and greater precision and being very much lighter. Three horses can pull a Japanese gun, while a Russian gun requires six.

The Russian officers, according to the sergeant, believed Japan would be beaten, but the Russian rank and file were convinced she would win. Every Japanese scout carries a map which enables him at once to discover where he is, but the Russians, having no such maps, are always at a loss.

The Japanese treat their prisoners well and with courtesy.

WHEN THEY HAWHAWED.

Ex-Judge Parker's Reply to a Traveler That Annoyed Politicians.

Ex-Judge Alton B. Parker, the Democratic nominee for president, was the center of a little group the other day comprising politicians, a newly returned traveler from abroad and a newspaper woman, says the New York Times. The traveler was giving a long and somewhat tiresome account of his experiences in Europe, and the newspaper woman was slowly but surely driving the judge to desperation by bombarding him with questions on many subjects.

"Judge, the most impressive thing I saw in Japan was an idol," said the traveler. "It was the figure of a woman seated and resting her chin in the palm of her right hand. I couldn't find out what she had done to be so immortalized."

The judge parried the newspaper woman's forty-ninth query, then said to the traveler: "I know. The Japanese are wise, and they erected that idol as expressing their reverence for a woman that can hold her own jaw."

Then the politicians to a man said, "Hawhaw!"

CHAPTER XI.

THE night after he left Traquair's castle Armstrong slept on Scottish soil, busy with his task of memory. Then he turned the notes in the fire that cooked his supper. It was scarcely daylight when he faced the clear and rippling Esk, and after crossing the stream to "fell English ground" he halted his horse on the southern shore and cast a long look at the hills of his native country as one who might be taking farewell of them. Then with a sigh he turned to his task and sent no further glance behind.

Arriving at a forking of the road, both branches tending south, he paused and pondered. Which should he take? He knew them equally well. The main road led to Carlisle and in time of peace would have been preferable. The other, less direct, would probably carry him farther in these uncertain times. The country showed no sign of the devastation of civil war unless it was the absence of a population and a deserted condition of the thoroughfares. That he could avoid contact with the parliamentary forces was impossible whichever road he took, and the question now demanding solution was not so much his direction as whether it were well to bring on his inevitable encounter with the Cromwellites sooner or later.

The Carlisle route promised the speedier run into the arms of the enemy, but by the other route he would have more chance of bargaining about cattle and thereby giving color of truth to his statement that he was an innocent Scots drover, anxious to turn an honest penny. When questioned by an officer he could then say he had endeavored to deal with So-and-so, and later investigation would prove the fact. But to an observer he bore the attitude of a stranger who had lost his way. This was evidently the conclusion arrived at by an object hidden in the hedge which had proved aids in the night's lodging. The object sprang out across the ditch with a suddenness that made the horse start and snort in alarm, to be soothed by the gentle pat of its rider's hand, for the imperturbable Armstrong seemed surprised at nothing that took place. The object had the wild, unkempt appearance of one who habitually slept out of doors. His long and matted hair, emaciated face and ragged beard, no less than his tattered clothing, or covering rather, made up of odds and ends of various costumes, formed a combination by no means attractive. He held in his hand, grasped by the middle, a long stick, somewhat taller than himself.

"My gay gentleman," he cried cheerfully, "will you pay the price of a fool's advice?"

"You haven't given me any."

"The advice all depends on what you pay for it. Let me see the coin, then I'll show you my wares. We differ in this, that I'll take whatever you give me, but you can take my advice or not, as you please."

The horseman threw him a coin, which the object clutched in midair with great expertness and examined eagerly.

"Thank you, gay gentleman. The advice is to turn your fine horse end for end and get back among the fools of your own kind. We are always safer among our own kind."

"Are there any cattle for sale hereabouts? I see none in the fields."

"I sometimes sell cattle myself," said the object, with a cunning look.

"It does not seem a very prosperous business, then. Where do you get your stock?"

"Oh, I pick it up on the roads. You'll find no cattle on the way to Carlisle. The country is swept bare in that direction. But I can lead you to a fine herd if you make it worth my while."

"In which direction?"

"Down this way. Come along. Are you after any particular breed?"

"No. Anything there's money in."

"You're just like me," said the vagrant, with a laugh, as he strode off down the unfrequented road. The object walked with incredible speed, laughing to himself now and then, and Armstrong was forced to trot his horse to keep up with him. On arriving at a slight eminence the guide waved his long arm toward a standing in the valleys, which looked like a deserted group of farm buildings, and said:

"There's a fine lot of cattle down yonder."

"I can see no signs of them."

"No, no! They're well stabled. Nothing lasts in the fields nowadays. They're not such fools as that. This herdsman knows when to keep his beasts in shelter. And with this that vagabond raised a shrill shout that echoed from the opposite hills.

down the lane, at whose junction with the road the beggar stood with repressed eagerness, he would find himself surrounded. Nevertheless he followed without betraying any knowledge of the trap he was entering.

As they neared the farmhouse a voice cried sharply "Halt!" and an armed man sprang up from behind the hedge, cutting off retreat, if such had been attempted. While the others made through the hedge to the lane, the tattered man as nimbly put the hedge between himself and his victim, as if fearing a reprisal, laughing boisterously, but rather nervously.

"Brave captain, I've brought you a fine horse and a gay gentleman, and the two are for sale."

The man who had cried "Halt!" stepped forth from the shelter of the nearest outbuilding, a drawn sword in his hand, followed by two others with primed matchlocks, stolidly ready for any emergency. Four others closed up the rear coming down the lane. There was no mistaking the fact that the man with the drawn sword was an officer, even if the object had not addressed him as captain, a salutation to which he paid no attention, for, although his uniform showed little difference from that of his men, he had in his stern face the look of one accustomed to obedience. The horseman had drawn up at the word and sat quite nonchalantly on his steed, as if this were an affair of no particular concern to himself.

"I'LL TAKE YOUR MESSAGE."

"Who are you?" asked the captain. "My name is William Armstrong," replied the rider simply. In spite of himself, the stolid face of the leader showed some surprise at this announcement, as if he knew the name and had not expected to hear it so frankly acknowledged.

"Where are you from?"

"I came across the border this morning. I am a Scotsman."

"Why are you here?"

"I am a cattle dealer, and as there is little doing in my own country I thought I would just see if business was better on this side of the line. This amusing lunatic said there was cattle for sale in the valley and led me hither, for which service I paid him a trifle."

"And so there is, and so there is," cried the lunatic, "but the price was for my advice, not for the leading hither. I must get my pay for that yet. Aye, there's cattle for sale here, and I'm the marketman."

"Peculiar to your folly," said the captain, scowling, then curtly to the horseman, "Dismount."

Armstrong sprang to the ground. "Your sword," demanded the officer. The weapon was handed to him.

"Do cattle dealers in your country carry arms?"

"To tell you the truth," said the young man, with a laugh, "if they did not they would carry little more home with them. I not only carry arms, but know how to use them on occasion."

"I ask to see your papers giving you permission to travel in England."

"I have none. Scotland is at peace with England, and a citizen of my country should not require papers in visiting England any more than an Englishman would need the same to go from one end of Scotland to the other."

"Humph," growled the captain, "you are well versed in the law. I hope you are engaged in no enterprise that is contrary to it."

"I hope not, captain. If you are klug's men you maintain that you are upholding the law. If you are parliamentary you swear the same thing."

"We swear not at all."

"Then I surmise you are no king's men. But in any case, until one or other of you have declared war against Scotland or until Scotland has declared war against either of you, or both, you meddle with a free citizen of Scotland at your peril."

"It is perhaps wisest to indulge in no threats."

"I am not indulging in any. I am stating a plain, uncontrovertible fact that would be held by none so stoutly as by General Cromwell himself."

"Then keep your dissertations on law until you see the general, which is like to happen before we are done with you."

"Nothing would give me greater pleasure than to have a discourse with that distinguished man. He is a fighter after my own heart, and I understand he is equally powerful in controversy."

"Search him."

To this order Armstrong not only made no objection, but assisted in its fulfillment. He took off his doublet and threw it to one of the men who approached him, then held his arms outstretched that another might with greater ease conduct his examination.

A third paid minute attention to the saddle bags, and a fourth took the saddle itself off the horse. The search brought to light some papers which the officer scanned, gaining thereby much information regarding the price of cattle.

The captain gave the papers to a subordinate and directed them to be tied together. He now took from his belt a folded sheet, opened it, and read its contents with care, glancing now and then at the man before him. Apparently the comparison was to his satisfaction, and he restored the document to its place with a grunt of approval.

"Is Bates ready? Tell him to come here," he said to the subordinate, who instantly disappeared, emerging from among the outbuildings shortly with a young man on a fine horse, evidently a which was seemingly the headquarters of a considerable section of the army encamped in the neighborhood. Into a room in this mansion Armstrong was conducted and left under guard, and he was pleased to see by the spread table that there was at least no design on the part of his captors to starve him.

Little Laughs on Ma And Pa by the Jesters

"MET your friend Goodman yesterday?"

"He's no friend of mine."

"What! When I saw him he was buying half a dozen etchings for your partner?"

"That's just it. They came home last night, and it took me three hours to hang them the way my wife wanted them."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

"Your wife tells me that she takes large credit for your success in business."

"She's right. Nobody could have met her expenses on a small income."—Detroit Free Press.

"I was so surprised," Mrs. Henpeck was remarking, "that I couldn't say a word."

"That was singular," said Mr. Henpeck, with unusual temerity. "What's that?"

"Why—er—I mean if you couldn't have said two words it would have been plural. Ha! ha! Just my little joke, my dear, that's all."—Philadelphia Press.

"What's the matter with Skeemer's automobile? Sometimes it makes a noise like the pounding of a trip hammer and then again it runs very quietly."

"Skeemer uses the trip hammer effect when he gets tired of hearing his wife talk."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"I can't keep the wolf away from the door," moaned the wife.

"Well," said the shiftless husband, "let him have it. The flies will get in whether it's there or not."—Cleveland Leader.

Gladys—If I thought you were going to the bank, papa, I would pin a bunch of forget me notes on your coat instead of these roses.—New York Evening Journal.

Had Heard of Them.

"If you visit Chicago," said Miss Lakeside to the son of nobility she met at the seashore, "we would be delighted to take you to see the Alderneys."

"It would please me very much," responded the titled one gallantly. "I believe they are quite a noted family in this country."

"Who?"

"Oh, the Alderneys."

"Why, I'm speaking of papa's cattle," exclaimed the Chicago girl proudly.—New York World.

Where's the Typewriter?

"Now," said the interviewer, "as to your method of working?"

"Well," replied the great author, "I take a writing pad."

"Yes?"

"And a pencil."

"See!" said the interviewer, "I take a pen and a pencil and the pencil in the other hand, and I write."

"And write?" Philadelphia American.

"Get into your saddle," commanded the captain, addressing Armstrong.

The latter tested the bucking which a soldier had just finished, drew up the strap a point, then, with his foot in the stirrup, turned and asked:

"Am I to consider myself a prisoner, sir?"

"Whatever questions you wish to put will be answered presently by one higher in authority than I."

"I must protest against this detention, sir."

"Your protest will doubtless be considered by the officer I referred to."

"General Cromwell, I surmise?"

"Or one delegated by him. Mount. We have far to go."

Armstrong leaped into the saddle, and the troop set off, with the captain at the head and himself in the midst of it. There was no chance of escape, even if he meditated such an attempt, which apparently he did not. The direction tended south and east, and as the sun was setting they came to Corbiton Manor, a large country house,

NEWARK, OHIO

THE WAR GAME

Conflict Between the Blues and Browns Down on the Plains in Athens County.

State Headquarters, Camp Herriek, Ohio, Aug. 19.—A drizzling rain and a tired bunch is the situation in this cruel war today.

Just who 'hike' yesterday has not been figured as yet. The problem as given out was that a Blue force advancing from the south has pushed forward a brigade on observation to Armitage. The The brigades were supposed to have crossed the river and gone into camp. The Browns, under command of General Speaks, advanced from the north and sent forward a brigade on observation to Glen Elton. Each force knew that the other was somewhere in the vicinity. The problem was to develop, if possible by cavalry scouts, the strength of each line. The Blues established an outpost line on the high ground, and pushed forward the cavalry. The Browns moved to the McJann house and also sent out cavalry. The maneuver as far as spectacular effects were concerned was nil. Cavalry scouting was the only feature with a little skirmish firing.

Large crowds from Nelsonville and Athens lined the hills and crossroads, but both the Blues and Browns acted cautiously, and the two armies did not come together.

Tomorrow will be real battle and on Sunday, weather permitting, a review will be held on the plains.

MOTHER

Of the Murderer Sent to Jail For Shielding the Fugitive Last Night.

New Castle, Pa., Aug. 19.—That Rossville Waite visited his Croton home last night, that he was there surprised and wounded in a successful attempt to escape and that he then retraced his way towards Energy, is a story whose truth is most strongly indicated among the great mass of stories that are being shuffled over at the city hall today. Mrs. Waite, mother of the murderer, was sent to jail this morning by Alderman Raney for shielding the fugitive last night.

The city council at 2 o'clock this afternoon voted $500 reward for the capture of Waite, dead or alive.

AGED EGGS

How They Are Told From Fresh Ones—Science Can Tell Almost Exact Age.

Washington, Aug. 19.—At last science has penetrated a mystery that has been puzzling man for ages. The egg can no longer pose as a sister problem with Ann. By a simple process one can immediately determine how old it is and can hurl it back at the haughty waiter who brought it to the table.

"The method is based upon the fact that the air chamber in the flat end of the egg increases with age," writes Consul General Guenther from Frankfurt to the state department. "If the egg is placed in a saturated solution of common salt, it will show an increasing inclination to float with the long axis vertical. The age of an egg can thus be determined almost to a day. A fresh egg lies in a horizontal position at the bottom of the vessel; an egg from three to five days old shows an elevation of the flat end, so that its long axis forms an angle of 20 degrees. With an egg eight days old, the angle increases to 45 degrees; with an egg fourteen days old, to 60 degrees, and with one three weeks old, to 75 degrees while an egg a month old floats vertically upon the pointed end."
